

Barbara Fuchs is Distinguished Professor of Spanish and English at UCLA, where she also directs the Diversifying the Classics project. She has published widely on early modern literature and culture as well as contemporary performance. Her most recent books are Knowing Fictions: Picaresque Reading in the Early Modern Hispanic World (Penn, 2021) and Theater of Lockdown: Digital and Distanced Performance in a Time of Pandemic (Bloomsbury/Methuen 2021). She is an editor of the Norton Anthology of World Literature, and currently edits Renaissance Quarterly. In 2021, she served as President of the MLA. Also in 2021, her work to promote Hispanic culture was recognized with the inaugural Premio Ñ from Spain's Instituto Cervantes.