

Housseem Eddine Chachia is Assistant Professor at University of Sfax (Tunisia) and Coordinator of especial program in Tunisia, at Arab Council for the Social Sciences (Beirut). Was a Visiting Postdoctoral Fellow at Center for Middle Eastern Studies - Harvard University (2017-2018). He mainly works on minorities in the Mediterranean, particularly the expulsion of Moriscos. He is interested in the processes and complexities of identity formation, and the relationship between the West and the Arab-Muslim world (especially the Maghreb) in modern era. His publications include: The Sephardic and the Moriscos: The Journey of expulsion and installation in the Maghreb (1492-1756), stories and itineraries.” (Beirut, 2015); Entre las orillas de dos mundos. El itinerario del jerife morisco Mūḥamed Ibn Abd Al-Rafī‘: de Murcia a Túnez (Murcia, Universidad de Murcia, 2017); “The Moment of Choice: The Moriscos on the Border of Christianity and Islam”, (London: Routledge, 2017).