

Luis Corteguera is Ahmanson-Murphy Professor of Renaissance History at the University of Kansas. He earned his PhD in History from Princeton. He was a Fulbright-Hays scholar at the Universitat de Barcelona, and has held fellowships from the ACLS, NEH, National Humanities Center, and Huntington Library. His publications have focused primarily on the history of the Spanish empire, dealing with topics such as popular revolts, religious and visual culture, and political myths. They include For the Common Good: Popular Politics in Barcelona, 1580–1640, Death by Effigy: A Case from the Mexican Inquisition, and Women, Texts, and Authority in the Early Modern Spanish World, co-edited with Marta Vicente. His presentation is part of a book project titled The Imaginary Foundations of Power: Politics and the Science of Myth in Europe, 1500–1650, about how the power of myth shaped the theory and practice of government in during the age of religious wars and the rise of modern states. He is also working on a book project tentatively titled Anthem for Catalonia: The History of a National Myth, about the relationship between myth, history, and nationalism. He is currently chair of the Department of History at Kansas and president of the Association for Spanish and Portuguese Historical Studies, the main professional organization of historians of Iberia in the US.
