

Camilo Gómez-Rivas is an associate professor of Mediterranean Studies in the Department of Literature at UC, Santa Cruz, where he teaches courses in Arabic Literature, Islamic Civilization, Islamic Law, and the culture of al-Andalus and the Maghrib. His first book, Law and the Islamization of Morocco under the Almoravids, investigates the development of legal institutions in eleventh and twelfth-century North Africa. His second book, The Almoravid Maghrib, is forthcoming in the Past Imperfect series with ARC Humanities Press.