

Susan McDonough, Associate Professor of history at UMBC, is a scholar of women, gender and sexuality in the medieval Mediterranean. Her work, which has been supported by fellowships from the Newberry Library and the NEH, has most recently appeared in Gender & History, and, with Michelle Armstrong-Partida, in Speculum and Past & Present. Together with Michelle, she's researching a monograph on Mediterranean singlewomen and she's also at work on her single authored monograph on sex workers in the same region.
