

Vetri Nathan is associate professor and head of the Italian Studies program in the Department of Modern Languages, Literatures and Cultures (MLLC) at the University of Massachusetts Boston. Nathan received an MA and PhD in Italian from Stanford University in 2009. His research and teaching interests include immigrant cultures and globalization in contemporary Italy, European colonialism and postcoloniality, Italian cinema, and global food studies. He has published various articles on these topics. His book, Marvelous Bodies: Italy's NewMigrant Cinema (Purdue University Press, 2017) was the first monograph to be published on this subject. He currently serves on the steering committee of DTIS, Diversity, Transformation, & Italian studies., which empowers scholars, educators, artists, and practitioners to promote diversity and transform Italian Studies by rejuvenating pedagogy, curriculum, and research.