

Michael Pifer is Marie Manoogian Professor of Armenian Language and Literature at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor; his research seeks to situate Armenian language and literary history within broader contexts of multilingualism and cultural exchange. He is a team member of the European Research Council funded project, Armenia Entangled: Connectivity and Cultural Encounters in Medieval Eurasia, 9th - 14th Centuries, based in Florence. Pifer is the author of Kindred Voices: A Literary History of Medieval Anatolia (Yale University Press, 2021) and the co-editor of the volume An Armenian Mediterranean: Words and Worlds in Motion (Palgrave Macmillan, 2018). His current project is on the history of Middle Armenian, the premodern Armenian vernacular, and the ways it survived the kingdom that fostered it. He is also a member of a collaborative public humanities project at U-M to tell the overlapping histories of Armenian, Turkish, Arabic, Ladino, and Kurdish speakers in Metro Detroit in the early 20th century.
