

Short Bio – Rosario Pollicino

Rosario Pollicino is an Instructor in Italian Studies at the University of South Carolina, Columbia. He holds a Ph.D. in Comparative Literature from Western University, Canada and M.A. in Italian Literary and Cultural Studies from the University of Connecticut.

His scholarly interests intertwine with Postcolonial literature and culture, migration, diaspora, memory, trauma and Mediterranean studies. His scholarly articles have been published in Quaderni d'Italinistica, NeMLA Italian Studies, In Verbis, among others. He is currently working to his book manuscript provisionally titled "Postcolonial trauma in the Mediterranean: the Italian Libyan Transnationally Community" and He is, also, coediting a volume titled Italian Experiences of Trauma through Films and Media with Cambridge Scholars Publishing.