

Biographical Note

Originally from Brisbane, Australia, James Rankine is a PhD candidate at the University of Rochester Department of History. His research examines the piracy in the Atlantic world in the late-seventeenth and early-eighteenth centuries, particularly the roles of power and violence aboard pirate vessels. He is a former Andrew W. Mellon Fellow in the Digital Humanities, and is the creator and curator of the Online Pirate Database. He has served as a site supervisor and teaching assistant on the Smith's Island Archeology Project, and a research assistant on several digital research projects at the University of Rochester.