

Biographical Note

Will Stroebel teaches comparative literature and Modern Greek at the University of Michigan. His research, which is grounded in the methods of book history and border studies, strives to foreground philologically displaced or uprooted literatures of the eastern Mediterranean — in particular, suppressed refugee literatures of the post-Ottoman Greco-Turkish borderscape, such as Arabic-script Greek (written by Greek-speaking Muslims) and Greek-script Turkish (written by Turkish-speaking Greek Orthodox Christians). His work has appeared in Book History, PMLA, Journal of Modern Greek Studies, and The Sources of Oriental Languages and Literatures. His first monograph, Literature's Refuge at the East-West Borderscape, is currently under review at Princeton University Press. Together with Kristina Gedgaudaite, he recently guest-edited a special issue of the Journal of Modern Greek Studies (October 2022) on the centennial of the 1923 Compulsory Population Exchange between Greece and Turkey, which set an international precedent for diplomatically legitimized ethnic cleansing and border-making in subsequent decades.
