

I propose a reflection on whether in intellectual fields marginal characters might have a greater role in connecting between cultures than more mainstream figures.