

Harry Eli Kashdan is Postdoctoral Scholar in the Global Mediterranean at The Ohio State University. After completing his Ph.D. in Comparative Literature at the University of Michigan in 2018, he was Lauro de Bosis Postdoctoral Fellow in Italian at Harvard before joining the department of French and Italian at OSU. His research addresses the importance of food to narratives of migration in the contemporary Mediterranean, drawing on sources in Italian, Arabic, French, English, and Judeo-Spanish. He has published articles on the literary qualities of cookbooks in Food & Foodways and Mashriq & Mahjar, and has pieces forthcoming in Quest and Italian Culture. His current projects include a short piece on the Italian food and travel program Little Big Italy and a co-edited volume on migrants' experiences around cooking and eating during the Covid-19 pandemic.