

I am currently pursuing a Master of Arts in Spanish at the University of Colorado Boulder, where my academic focus lies in Peninsular 20th-century literature and language pedagogies. Throughout my studies, I have immersed myself in researching various topics. My exploration of 20th-century sicaliptic literature in Spain, particularly with authors such as Álvaro Retana, has provided me with an understanding of the interplay between humor and social commentary in Spanish literature. Additionally, my research in second language acquisition has provided valuable insights into effective pedagogical approaches for teaching Spanish as a second language, emphasizing the importance of incorporating communicative strategies and cultural content. As I look ahead, I am enthusiastic about continuing to explore the intersections of literature and language pedagogy. I am committed to fostering a dynamic learning environment where students can engage critically with the Spanish language.
