

Hila Brokman is a graduate student at Tel Aviv University under the supervision of Prof. Irad Malkin. Her Master's degree in Literature explored the concept of fate (moira) and the figure of Herakles in the Homeric epic. In her PhD dissertation, Hila explores, through the lens of human sacrifices myths, how ritual and social norms in Athenian society were conducted. Her current research focuses on which divinities were willing to receive a human sacrifice and under what conditions.
