

Alex Dika Seggerman is assistant professor of Islamic art history in the Department of Arts, Culture and Media at Rutgers University-Newark. She received her Ph.D. in the history of art from Yale. Her scholarship investigates the intersection of Islam and modernism in art history. She is author of Modernism on the Nile: Art in Egypt between the Islamic and the Contemporary (UNC Press, 2019), which traces the arc of Egyptian modernism in art, arguing that artists confronted and visualized the transnational context of their circulation through a “constellational modernism.” She is also co-editor of Making Modernity in the Islamic Mediterranean (Indiana University Press, 2022), a volume of essays that repositions major changes in nineteenth century Islamic art as the result of transformative political, technological, and market shifts. She currently serves as an Assistant Editor for the International Journal of Islamic Architecture, and in 2022, she will be the Leonard A. Lauder Visiting Senior Fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Visual Arts in Washington, D.C.
