Rami Tannous is an associate scholar at Haifa University.

He has completed his doctoral studies at the Department for the Study of Religion at the University of Toronto, where he specialized in late antique Christianity and Early Islam.

His doctoral dissertation examined the retelling of the Christian nativity story in the Qur'ān.

In addition to this theme, his current research also explores the delineation of Mary's image in the Protoevangelium of James in view of Greco-Roman medical and religious beliefs and practices.
