

Dr. Yitzhaq Feder is a lecturer at the University of Haifa. He is the author of Blood Expiation in Hittite and Biblical Ritual: Origins, Context and Meaning (SBL Press, 2011). His latest book, Purity and Pollution in the Hebrew Bible: From Embodied Experience to Moral Metaphor (Cambridge, 2022), examines the psychological foundations of impurity in ancient Israel. He has received numerous prizes, including the 2012 SBL David Noel Freedman Award for Excellence and Innovation in Biblical Studies. His most recent research focuses on biblical and ancient Near Eastern notions of taboo and their implications for understanding the origins of moral thinking.